In Sunday's issue of the JOURNAL Judge Haydon had an article about water storage and reservoir sites in the mountains west of Truckee valley. The communication was full of common sense about the present and future need of Washoe county for an additional water supply to provide all the year round sufficient water for the demands of the people and their industries.

The Judge's youth was past in Kentucky when the people of the west and southwest were engaged in laying the foundation of the material superstructure in the form of railroads, telegraph lines and other public appliances to meet the demands of an ever increasing and expanding commerce.

The extensive domain of the United States has given and continues to give opportunity for material development that hitherto has been unknown to the world. It was Uncle Sam's rivers and pastures that gave opportunity to brave men with strong arms to enter the woods and prairies of the west and southwest to build the foundation of a future commercial structure that has surpassed anything that was conceived in the most fertile imagination in the advance army of development. Every movement made by those advance men had a meaning that contained some practical idea respecting improvement present and future.

They were a class of men possessed of strong common sense, and a determined will power sufficient to overcome any obstacle in the way of development. The Judge's early education was received from practical men whose practical ideas were everywhere present and it is quite evident from what he has said about water storage that he has not ceased to be influenced by his early lessons.

The people of Reno are trying to provide means through taxation for additional educational facilities for the youth which is highly commendable, but there are other methods of education than those contained in books that we should not neglect. While the people are engaged in providing means for more advanced literary culture it is imperative that the means to provide additional educational advantages should not be neglected. The means for additional literary culture are derived from a substantial growth, or development of wealth which must be taken care of, if we desire to have the pleasures as well as the advantages of cultured life.

There seems to be a narrow conception in the minds of some people that all culture is derived from theories and facts collected in books. No greater mistake could be made by those who entertain such thoughts than to form a judgment upon them that leads to a belief that all there is to a liberal education is received from books. Do not believe that it is the intention of the writer to convey a thought that tends to lower the standard of knowledge received in the schools, or that is derived from books, but he does mean to affirm that the lessons which flood the mind with refining thoughts and influences from nature's store-house of facts are as necessary to a liberal education and a cultured life as knowledge received in the schools.

Refining influences are received from the beautiful in one place. Awe-inspiring grandeur connected with the sublime fills the mind, which leads to thoughts upon the creator of all things in another place, and still in another place the grand and the sublime gives its lessons, and so on through the vastness of nature there is brought to the mind the most refining thoughts and lessons, full of knowledge and wisdom.

When we have gone through all the lessons that nature can give in beauty, sublimity, grandeur and utility, it is learned that the whole is dependent on plenty of water. What is said is intended to convey in a limited way the size of a practical idea when used. Judge Haydon's mind in boyhood was trained in practical things by men who were doing the chief practical work the world has known, when they were engaged in laying the foundations that were to receive the material superstructure of the great republic.

The practical in his mind is illustrated by a fable from Aesop, which is that the gods help those who help themselves. The lesson contained in the fable was impressed upon the John Henderson had an interesting experience late Saturday night in a saloon across the track. While he was playing a game of cards with the proprietor of the house and had just lit his pipe for a comfortable smoke, a bibulous bystander drew his six-shooter and badly mutilated the pipe aforesaid. Henderson was once chief of police on the Comstock and it did not take him many seconds to land Mr. Sharpshooter in the muddy gutter.

The Shoe and the Woman.

Hereupon I ventured to reason with the woman.

"Your conventional immunities," I urged, "are not compatible with the new responsibilities which you seek to assume. That is where the shoe pinches."

The woman gave me a withering look.

"Pinches?" she exclaimed most scornfully. "It's a mile too big! I could wear two sizes smaller!"

Sure Enough Tale.

In one of the private schools here in town there is a small boy who is always cheerfully miles behind everybody else. He is not a dull boy, but learning does not appeal to him as being a thing especially to be desired. Recently the teacher told the class in composition that on the next day she would expect each of them to be able to write a short anecdote. She explained with great care the meaning of the word anecdote, and next day when she called the class up to write all but the laggard went at once to work.

"Why don't you write an anecdote, Rob?" asked the teacher.

"I forget what an anecdote is," said Rob, undisturbed.

"I explained to you yesterday, Rob, and you ought to remember," said the teacher, a bit out of patience. "An anecdote is a tale. Now write."

Rob bent over his slate and, with much twisting of brow and writhing of lip ground out his task. When the verses were collected, his was at the very top of the heap. The teacher picked it up, and this is what she read: "Yesterday we had soup made from the anecdote of an ox."—Youth's Companion.

SIX PERISH IN A RAILROAD DISASTER

The Eastbound Flyer Crashes Into an Arroyo Near Mill City.

One of the most serious train wrecks that has taken place in Nevada in recent years occurred at 5:30 Sunday morning near Mill city.

Train No. 2, known as the eastbound flyer, met disaster in a washcut about 60 feet long and 30 feet deep, caused by melting snow on the Humboldt mountains. An hour earlier a freight train passed over the road in safety.

Engineer Abbey did not see the chasm in time to reverse or apply the air. The rails and ties still hung suspended over the gap. The locomotive leaped the gulch and turned over. Mr. Abbey was badly scalded and his feet injured. The tender fell, carrying Fireman Whitaker to his death.

Under the terrific momentum of the train, the mail car also leaped the arroyo and forged past the engine. Mail Clerks Schuyler and Gavin were both hurt, the former sustaining a broken leg. The buffet car also escaped the leap, but fell short, bridging the gap. None of the other cars left the track, although the foremost coach was partly tele-cooped.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Biesinger of San Francisco were instantly killed as was also C. Conter of the same city.

Two tramps, who were beating their way, were killed. Conductor Markle and brakeman R-eves were painfully injured. They were taken to Ogden.

Specials were sent out from Reno, Wadsworth and Winnemucca, carrying coffins, physicians and nurses. The injured and dead were placed aboard a special and hurried to San Francisco. A train passed through Reno at 9 o'clock Sunday night.

Through the courtesy of the road a JOURNAL reporter went up to Truckee and interviewed the sufferers. Engineer Brown and Constable Steel carried the train swiftly and smoothly. Dr. Kistler of Wadsworth and Mrs. Hilderbrand of Winnemucca ministered to the injured.

It was a sad train, bearing the dead and wounded. The saddest of all was the case of Miss Elizabeth Biesinger who, in a second's time, saw her father and mother die.

Millionaire And Beggar.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Biesinger were sent to San Francisco yesterday morning for interment. It is worthy to remark that the wreck Sunday illustrates the old proverb about the random arrow of death. Mr. and Mrs. Biesinger were worth a million and a quarter dollars, while but a few feet from them perished in the same instant and from the same cause, two penniless tramps who were beating their way.

Another Body Recovered.

The body of Fireman Whitaker was taken from the wreckage yesterday and brought to Reno where it is being prepared for burial at the Riverside undertaking parlors. The remains will be shipped today to Olympia, Washington, where his parents reside.

Again in Trouble.

Train No. 2, the eastbound flyer, got into trouble again last night. It ran into a derailment switch near Prosser creek siding. No damage was done and nobody was injured, but it was nearly four hours before the train could be placed on the rails and sent on its way rejoicing.

Traffic Still Impeded.

Passengers and mail was transferred around the wreckage yesterday. It will be a day or two before the gap is closed, owing to the soft, muddy, alkaline nature of the ground.
